Based on employee surveys conducted by Energage, the Top Workplaces of Middle Tennessee Award assesses various facets of workplace culture, including alignment, execution and connection. This year, more than 2,000 companies were invited to participate. The employees of LP's Nashville-based headquarters were among those surveyed. Based on questions about employee loyalty, motivation, and likelihood to recommend LP as a place to work, LP posted a better overall engagement score than the national benchmark.

"We are extremely proud to receive The Tennessean's Top Workplaces of Middle Tennessee Award for the second consecutive year," said LP Chair and CEO Brad Southern. "This recognition underscores our strategy of empowering team members, fostering collaboration and belonging, and encouraging innovation. Our employees are the backbone of our success, and this award is a testament to their commitment."

LP places significant emphasis on team member development programs, mentorship opportunities, and competitive compensation and benefits packages in order to foster the personal and professional growth of members of its workforce.

In addition, LP engages in sustainability initiatives and community outreach, actively supporting charitable causes and encouraging employee participation in volunteer activities, fostering a sense of purpose and social responsibility within the company.

"Earning a Top Workplaces Award is a badge of honor for companies, especially because it comes authentically from their employees," said Energage CEO Eric Rubino. "That's something to be proud of. In today's market, leaders must ensure that they're allowing employees to have a voice and be heard. That's paramount. Top Workplaces do this, and it pays dividends."
